

Coffee shop complaints

The problem with Coffee Shops.

Yes, a coffee shop can be a great place to study, but seriously there are some complaints here. Therefore, here is a open letter list of complaints to Coffee Shops:

- You Play ColdPlay way too much.

ColdPlay is nice, but only in moderation. It also makes me wonder if your CD selection is lacking.

- Coffee is too expensive. We can all thank Starbucks for this one.

- Quit coming by to wipe the table off/sweep every 5 minutes. I know you're trying to look/stay busy.

- Get more outlets so I can plug in my laptop.

- Quit teasing me and flirting just for a tip. Yes I'm talking to you cute coffee girl.

- Quit serving dry overpriced bakery items: bagel, pastry, etc. Why do people order this stuff?

- Quit charging for Wifi! I would spend way more money and time there if you had a free open connection for customers.

- Quit asking me for whip cream. If I wanted it, I'd ask for it.

- Your daily specials suck.

- I don't care that your bean water came from Ethiopia.

- There are way too many fancy names on your menu.

- Quit rushing me when I'm looking at your menu and trying to order.

- And finally, I come here 5 times a week because

- a) I'm trying to get your phone number

- b) I'm hoping to get a free drink one of these days

- c) I am a coffee adict

- d) all of the above
